

Fables from Kaleeleh and Demneh

adapted

by

Ali R.

Amir-Moéz

THE ORIGIN OF FABLES

We can not put a finger on the map of the world and say, "Well, this is where the first fable was written." But according to available books, the oldest fables have been written in Sanskrit. Sanskrit is the language which was used in India more than two thousand

Fables from Kaleeleh and Demneh

Adapted by

ALI R. AMIR-MOEZ

In the south there was a city called Girl Happiness. In this city there lived a king whose name was King of Power. He had learned all the knowledge of his time and was a very successful king. But he had three sons who seemed to be quite stupid. Actually they were lazy and did not want to learn anything. This made the king extremely sad. One day he consulted his ministers.

"What should I do about my sons?" asked the King. "They are practically useless and parasites to the society."

"They should study grammar," said a minister. "If a person knows the language very well, then he can learn everything else by himself," he continued.

"This takes quite some time," said the prime minister. "I know a wise man called Vishnusharma who is a master of all knowledge. If you let him teach the princes, they will become wise."

GREETINGS

Copyright, 1962

by

ALI R. AMIR-MOEZ

To my friends

Lithographed in U.S.A. by
EDWARDS BROTHERS, INC.
Ann Arbor, Michigan